

Howard County
Public Schools

OUTSTANDING BUSINESS PARTNERSHIPS — CTE PROGRAM

FINANCIAL COUNCIL INCORPORATED / JOHN D. HAUSERMAN

Partnership with Howard County Public Schools

The partnership between Financial Council Incorporated and the Academy of Finance in Howard County Public Schools benefit and enrich the students, teachers, and local community. John Hauserman is a 17 year veteran in the field of financial planning. A major part of his focus throughout his career has been to give back to the community.

Mr. Hauserman has created the Retirementquest.com website which provides basic financial education to the general public, is the Baltimore region CFP ambassador, and is a member of the Academy of Finance advisory board. Mr. Hauserman has mentored students, offered internships, provided scholarships, conducted workshops and presentations, and worked closely with school staff and advisory board members reviewing and resolving curriculum and board administrative issues.

Thanks to his efforts students graduate with a strong knowledge of career opportunities in the field of finance, the ability to create financial plans for their future, and to make good financial decisions. He has created life-long mentor connections for the students within the industry of their interest by connecting students with community members. He has exposed students to unique experiences through his own mentorships and his monetary support eases the financial burden for students going to college.

For the teachers, Mr. Hauserman brings his expertise to the classroom offering alternative methods of learning and a deeper understanding of financial issues that are current and applicable. He supports curriculum goals of the program by reviewing curriculum and aligning it with industry, and offers giveaway prizes for special occasions. As an advisory board member Mr. Hauserman has also increased advisory board membership by introducing new members to the board and mentoring board members.